INVINCIBLE PALS

Issue 70, awesome. The big 70! If this comic were a person, dying of "old age" would be a possible way of going. Sweet!

I'm continually shocked and pleased by the success of this book. It's so cool to be getting up to these high numbers, working our way up to the monumental issue 100... just a short 30 issues away. Thanks to all of you for sticking with us and Cory Walker, Bill Crabtree, Ryan Ottley, Cliff Rathburn, Rus Wooton and FCO Plascencia should all give themselves a pat on the back for doing their part to keep this title going.

Next issue WON'T be issue 71. Weird, I know. Next month sees the release of INVINCIBLE: RETURNS #1, which is essentially another issue of the book, it just takes place between 70 and the March shipping issue 71. So be on the lookout. It's a special one-shot issue because it's a very special tale featuring the return of Invincible's original blue and yellow costume as well setting the stage for the big VILTRUMITE WAR which begins in issue 71.

Did I mention that the Viltrumite War starts in issue 71?

That's a big deal... everything that this series has been working toward--all the business with Nolan and Allen and Viltrumites and Mark has all been leading up to this. It's going to be sweet!

So... let's answer this mail.

Kirkman,

I was just reading your Invincible Library volume 1....and this current issue, #68. I have to tell you, you're doing an astounding (Wolf-Man... heh) job. STILL to this day. Your book is like a drug! A very addicting one! May I ask a question? What has ever happened to that ape-detective guy? I loved that dude!

That's Damien Darkblood the DEMON Detective... he's not an ape. He recently showed up in Astounding Wolf-Man (heh) and will appear here again eventually.

How are you holding up with all the work? I know you got a lot of stuff to take care of...so thank you for the awesome series.

Stressed out but y'know, fine. It's better to have too much work than no work at all... right? It's a lot of fun, too. I like getting to bounce around between The Walking Dead, The Astounding Wolf-Man, Haunt, Image United, Pilot Season and this book... but it has been a busy past six months.

Let's all give a round of applause for Mr. Ottley! I feel he doesn't get nearly all the credit he deserves...

Ottley is the best, we love the man around these parts. With the recent announcement that Ryan is leaving Haunt after issue 5, this will be the only title you can get your sweet, sweet Ottley fix on.

Oh, I heard something about this being a future motion picture, do you have any news on that?

Thank you!
Jordan B.

No news on a possible feature film. There are things always going on behind the scenes, but nothing I can speak about publicly, unfortunately.

Dear esteemed Mr. Kirkman, Long-time reader, first-time...emailer?

That works.

Anyways, I just finished reading the new issue and damn have you been knocking it out of the park lately, but this issue is probably your best yet (which is saying something).

I loved Dinosaurus, where did you come up with this guy and is there any chance of seeing him again? His rhetoric made a bit of sense in a twisted way and he can actually hurt Mark.

Named by my son, designed by Ryan and pretty much all the other stuff by me. I think I mentioned it here but my son basically named a dinosaur toy he had Dinosaurus all on his own and I really dug the way it sounded... so I used it.

The entire "meet the parents" sequence was great, especially the after dinner conversation between Mark and Eve's dad was just...wow, couldn't stop laughing. On Conquest and the Sequids, all I can say is "aw yeah!"

What really surprised me was the final page. Damn, this threw me more than absolutely anything so far in this series. Though I'm a bit worried, since this will inevitably lead into "a very special issue" type thing, and the very utterance of the word abortion would just tear the entire fanbase in half to the point where I'll have to unplug my internet to stay alive. But at this point you've earned yourself enough points for me to actually give you a chance to tell your story.

Anyways, keep up the good work,
Nathan

Yes please... give me a chance to tell the story. Thanks. Glad you dug the issue. The Eve story is going to be very good. Don't let the fact that I haven't mentioned it at all in issues 69 and 70 make you think it's not important--it's going to be a big one. Mark just has to deal with this pesky Viltrumite problem, too!

Hello there!

First off, I have to say, this is by far the best series Image has to offer, in my personal opinion. I have been reading since issue one and I love how the story started off small and local in Invincible's life, but is now rapidly expanding into an amazing universe! Thank you so much for that. Now on to the important matter...Ok, so last issue (#68), on page 3, I spotted a flying taco underneath Invincible's arm in his battle with Dinosaurus...Is that something Ottley just threw in there? And now that I found it, do I get some sort of prize? Also, will we be seeing more of Dinosaurus? I really liked his start and I think he will be an awesome character. And what kind of characters can we expect to see in the future? Any "rebirths" like we're familiar to in Marvel? Or is that where Invincible differs from the other superhero titles? Much thanks and keep cranking out those amazing stories!

Mike

If it makes sense to bring a character back then I will, y'know, like Immortal. Any character I've brought back to life, like Angstrom Levy or Dupli-Kate was killed with the intention of bringing them back. Now, I will state for the record I have no plan to bring back Rex Splode and I have no intention of ever doing so. He died... that happens. His body was pulverized... he's gone. Will we see a version of him from another dimension... maybe, who knows... but the one we know and love is dead.

And yes, Dinosaurus will be back before you know it.

Mr. Kirkman and Crew,

Great to See Messrs. Ottley and Rathburn back on the illustration duties. While I loved Cory Walker's two-issue stint, Ottley has to be one of the top five comic book artists out there and I can never get enough of his art. I'm surprised some of the competition hasn't tried to snap him up. Man, could you see Ryan drawing Spider-Man or Superman? Whoa...the mind boggles at the thought of that superhero goodness (but only if you were writing, then it would be perfect)!

And I'd be miserable. Heh. I much prefer the two of us doing Invincible together.

OK, the rest of the issue. Cool dinosaur villain. I'm guessing we'll be seeing more of him in the future. Mark thinking about snapping his neck, huh? Hmm...maybe the Viltrumite is coming out in him?

Hmmmm.

The dinner scene with Eve and her parents was absolutely hilarious! Easily the best part of this issue for me. Eve's dad is a real winner. The look on Mark's face after his "conversation" with Eve's dad was the best. I'm sure lots of guys can relate to that first meeting with a girlfriend's dad.

Thankfully, I can't. Eve's dad is ceeeeeeeepy.

Conquest is not dead. I knew that. Didn't think he would break out so easily. I can't wait for the Viltrumite War to kick off.

You won't have to wait long!

Sequids are icky.

The last page...damn! Shoulda used protection. But, then again, can latex stop Viltrumite enhanced spermatozoa?

Great work.
Matt Gullifer

Sure... always use a condom, even if you suspect you may be a Viltrumite.

Yo Kirkman,

Issue #68 was a good read. Dinosaurus actually being human was awesome. Can't wait to learn more about them. I also liked seeing the dark side of Mark come out. Hell, if I was Mark I'd kill bad guys...I mean they are bad!

My friend and I have been waiting for this issue to come out so thanks for making the unemployment days entertaining!

Eesh... sorry to hear that.

Seeing Eve with the pregnancy test was very exciting, aside from the fact that she is nowhere near happy. This could go so many different ways. I can't wait to see what you end up doing to them. I don't think it's gonna be something good, well at least for them.

Stay tuned!

Invincible Presents - Atom Eve & RexSplode was awesome! Rex was so badass! I liked the shot of him on the table cut open and being born into RexSplode. His assassin outfit looked so cool. The way he took down five guys at once reminded me of old school Jackie Chan.

What's up with Oliver's teacher? I found it odd that she still comes around. I think she is a spy for someone out to get Mark. Is she?

YES! No. She's Oliver's teacher. Hired by Cecil, but she's still just working for the Grayson family. She's nice...

The teaser for next month made me think. Why does everyone hate Mark?

Wouldn't you?

What's this Kirkopotamus, THREE cliffhangers? I love it.

I was pretty proud of that, actually.

I'm sure you'll be happy to know that I took my time reading issues #62-68. I started on Monday, and finished a few minutes ago. It was awesome.

It's funny, I don't have the time or date of your email. Could have arrived early Monday morning for all we know.

How can I tell you how excited I am for what is coming up?!

Send money!

The smash cut is a technique often used in your comics, so how hard was it, revealing those monster sized cliffhangers without jumping into credits? These plots build up, like boiling water, but instead of rolling over and bubbling, they explode, killing everyone in the kitchen and tearing the house to shreds. This is good stuff Kirkceratops. I can't wait for the next issue.

Levi

I like Kirkasaurus Rex... or Kirkdactyl (which is one of those dinosaurs from my youth that technically doesn't exist right? Poor Brontosaurus).

Dear Robert,

Thank you for Invincible and Mark Grayson. Thank you for a comic that a father and son can share in a meaningful way. I'm 48-years-old and never "grew out" of comics. My son is 17 and has grown up in a house that loves reading. He has had access to the comics I bring home ever since he could read (although my run of Preacher is still hidden away in an attic).

He's 17! Let the boy read Preacher already! I was 17 when I was reading it. It's only that much cooler when you read it when you're not supposed to. My kids get Preacher when they're EIGHT! (Not really).

We both love Invincible and it's now part of a ritual for us. If I come home from the comic shop with an Invincible in the bag, it's the first thing we read, usually him first and me second. For over five years we've watched Mark deal with everyday questions in extraordinary circumstances. He's wrestled with his relationships with his father, higher education, friends, colleagues at work, girls, politics, making a living and most recently his own morals. This is so much more than a superhero book. For me, it has also been a book about a boy becoming a man and how difficult that journey can be. And how joyous it can be too.

So thank you, not just for the 18 minutes of entertainment a month. Thank you for inspiring conversations between me and my son over cereal, in the car and just while hanging out.

18 minutes? That's a good time... that means you're taking the time to enjoy the issue, good. Glad to hear it. Too often I get "This took me five minutes to read!" Which means you read it wrong. Seriously, thanks for all the compliments here.

Mark is not real but the emotion and memories he's generated for my son Brandon and I are real and part of his own, personal coming of age story. As an adult, I have never written to a comic book creator. As a dad, I wanted to share my appreciation with you for a character that continues to grow and a body of work that has sustained a level of excellence over the long haul.

Sincerely,
Brad

And for the record, I appreciate you supporting the book so I can feed and clothe my kids. Although, did you really have to share one copy of each issue? Doesn't your son deserve his own collection?

P.S. Since my son had his first letter to a comic printed in Invincible a few years ago, you have a chance to make one more father son connection for us.

Done and done! Thanks Brad, I hope to keep this book as awesome as ever for a good long time. Thanks for sticking with it.

And that brings us to the end of another letters column. Sweet!

We'll see you back here next month for INVINCIBLE: RETURNS #1!!
